Description of the Related Art In the related art, a camera on a mobile phone has a memory card in the inside and can photograph information on a picture taken by the camera. The memory card is attached to the camera as a detachable storing medium so as to photograph the information on the picture. The memory card is inserted into a dedicated card slot of the camera and locked thereto by a locking claw provided on a camera body side, and there is a case where, in such a state, a lock releasing part provided on the camera body side is separated from a lock receiving part provided on the memory card side, whereby the locking of the memory card is canceled and the memory card can be removed (for example, see Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2006-17077).Q: Difference between and and then
